

decipher the cultural functions and where he developed a wonderful network and the ability to envision and redefine a place into something extraordinary.

Edgar Vaudeville is not only a talented professional but he is also very good in discovering and growing talents to make them enrich the businesses in which he aids. Edgar has thus managed to bring the best of the best in Le Bar du Bristol such as Maxime Hoerth, named Best Barman and craftsman in France in 2011 by Meilleur Ouvrier de France.

During the show, we were very surprised by how Edgar engaged conversation with his guests and how he can make them feel confident and relaxed. I have also seen the successful documentary that has been made about Qatar where a TV crew followed Edgar during his workdays, including his hosting of the first outdoor fashion show in Qatar. I can assure you that what our cameras captured was not unique. The documentaries accurately portray his unique talent for PR, and ability to host the most elite of clientele. He is consistently confident, reliable and professional. Besides, it was obvious from our interview that people constantly came to him for advice about trends, the places, people, and cultural aspects. This is particularly the theme to our documentaries and what we aim to share with our audience, making his advice that much more precious.

For my next show about New York, I will definitely have Edgar in the show as one of the most talented PR and event's organizer in the country from his new home at Le Colonial. We are very lucky to have talents like Edgar coming to the country to share his knowledge and passion for the hospitality industry.

My conclusion is that Edgar Vaudeville is a gifted professional who is not only a unique Ambassador of French luxury hospitality with an extensive savoir-faire of the industry, but also with an extensive international career developed in the most luxurious and renowned establishments, some of which were a true challenge.

Furthermore, I thus can attest that Edgar Vaudeville would be a great representative of France in New York and he will bring his very sought after French touch and personality to the Le Colonial restaurant. Needless to say, I wish to interview him again at the occasion of the premiere events he will create for Le Colonial.
